"Romeo and Juliet."

Charles Gounod was born in Paris, June 17, 1818, and died in that city, October 18, 1893. His "Roméo et Juliette" occupies the second position of merit on the brief list of his operas, the first place, of course, being awarded to "Faust". The excellence of the libretto of the latter opera naturally led Gounod to go to its makers, when he conceived the desire to write a lyric work on the familiar love-tragedy of Shakespeare. That he should have entertained such an idea was almost inevitable, for he must have felt that the situations of the story offered abundant opportunities for the composition of pure lyric music, in which he excelled. The tragedy of "Romeo and Juliet" had tempted many opera-composers before Gounod. Among them may be mentioned Dalayrac, Steibelt, Zingarelli, Vaccai, Bellini, and Marchetti, while Hector Berlioz had made it the subject of a dramatic symphony. The librettists of "Faust", Jules Barbier and Michael Carré, arranged the book, which some dramatic critics have praised as being an admirable adaptation of Shakespeare's play. Mlle. de Bovet, a French biographer of Gounod, has very sensibly said, however, that "all Jules Barbier's cleverness could not make the plot other than a love-duet, or rather a succession of love-duets".

While this is true, it is also a fact that the libretto presents the salient incidents of Shakespeare's tragedy in a compact and well-connected manner. In the endeavor to increase the number of parts for young women singers, the librettists introduced Stephano, the page, a character not found in the original play, and having no necessary connection with the story.

They may be forgiven this concession to the demands of operatic tradition, for the sake of the other excellences of their work. Gounod's music has been censured for its monotony, and the critics have generally agreed that this is due to the continual love-duet. A more pointed criticism is that which notes the similarity in the general style of these love-passages to those in "Faust". This similarity cannot well be questioned, and it forces comparisons which are not favorable to the music of "Romeo and Juliet". The love-scenes in "Faust" are the products of genuine inspiration, and they rise to a level of real greatness, seldom attained by the music of "Romeo and Juliet".

In regard to this aspect of the work, M. Arthur Pougin has well said: "If one wished to enter into what might be called a psychological analysis of the score, it would be necessary to discover how great were the difficulties of the composer in writing 'Romeo' without repeating himself, after having written 'Faust'. For, although the subjects of the two works differ widely, we see the same situations reproduced in each, under the same scenic conditions, and the stumbling-block was all the more troublesome, since these situations were the most salient ones, and constituted, as it were, the very core of the dramatic action. Witness the balcony-scene of 'Romeo' and the garden-scene of 'Faust', or the duel of Romeo and Tybalt, with the death of the latter in the first, and the duel of Faust and Valentine, also mortal, in the second. Truly, a musician must have a singular power, a very remarkable faculty of reiteration, to attempt, successfully, such a repetition of similar episodes".

Gounod was not the only man of high ability who attempted to do a second time what he had done at first to perfection. His failure to equal his first performance is certainly a demonstration of the limited power of his imagination; but, outside of the ranks of geniuses of the first order, such as Shakespeare and Goethe, no one has produced a second work so similar in character to a first, and yet so crowded with new beauties, as Gounod did in his "Romeo and Juliet". It is, beyond dispute, an opera of genuine and notable beauty. In the hands of artists, this work never fails to touch the heart of public enthusiasm; and in America, it has certainly grown greatly in favor since, in recent years, it has been performed by a company of singers of the first rank.

It would be uncomplimentary to the reader to tell the familiar story of "Romeo and Juliet", but it is necessary to outline it as it is given in the libretto of Barbier and Carré. The prelude contains a scene in which all the characters are grouped on the stage, and reference is made to the unhappy feud between the houses of Montague and Capulet. The first act takes place in the home of the Capulets. A ball is in progress in honor of Juliet's début in society. Juliet is formally introduced by her father, and subsequently expresses her happiness in the vocal waltz. To the ball, as maskers, come Romeo, Mercutio, and some of their friends. The first meeting of Romeo and Juliet takes place, and love at first sight follows. The appearance of Tybalt, who recognizes Romeo, gives rise to some dialogue, revealing to the lovers the identity of their respective families. Romeo and his friends leave the ball.

In the second act, we have the familiar balcony-scene of the Shakespearean drama. The interview of the lovers is briefly interrupted by the passage of the watch, whose suspicions of the presence of a stranger in the grounds are put to rest by the nurse. The love-scene then continues till the fall of the curtain. In the following scene, Romeo and Juliet go to the cell of Friar Laurence, and are married. In the third act, the feud between the two houses breaks out. Stephano, Romeo's page, fights with Tybalt, and Mercutio also fights with him, and is slain. Tybalt tries to force a quarrel with Romeo, but he declines the combat, until he is impelled to take vengeance for the death of Mercutio, his kinsman. Then he kills Tybalt, and is instantly overcome with horror and remorse, because Tybalt is Juliet's cousin. The Duke arrives upon the scene, and Capulet lays his complaint before him. The Duke sentences Romeo to exile, but the young man declares that he prefers death.

The rising of the curtain on the fourth act discovers Romeo and Juliet together in Juliet's chamber. Their love-scene is ended by the breaking of day, and Romeo is compelled to depart. Capulet enters and informs his daughter that he has chosen for her a husband, the Count Paris. In despair, she asks the aid of the Friar, who is present. He gives her a phial containing a drug to put her in a condition closely resembling death. The final scene shows us Juliet in her tomb. Romeo, returning to seek her, finds her, as he believes, dead. He slays himself, but before he breathes his last, Juliet revives, and the lovers join in one final outburst of despairing love before both die. It will be seen from this outline that the librettists succeeded in preserving the entire tragic action of the original play, while omitting the lighter scenes, such as those of Juliet with her mother and the nurse.

It is not necessary to enter into a detailed consideration of the music, which is very well able to speak for itself. In the first act, the most melodious and pleasing numbers are the solo of Capulet, the song of Mercutio describing Queen Mab, Juliet's waltz-song, and the first duet of the lovers. The waltz-song is a mere exhibition-aria, altogether out of place, and inserted only out of deference to a long-established custom. The second act consists almost wholly of the balcony-scene, and here Gounod's ability as a lyric writer is delightfully displayed. The music is, perhaps, a little too sentimental and not sufficiently passionate, but it is melodious and poetic. In the next scene, there is nothing remarkable, though the passage sung after the wedding usually pleases the hearers.

The following scene, in which Mercutio and Tybalt are killed, leans somewhat toward the style of Meyerbeer, but it lacks the theatrical vigor of that composer. On the other hand, the declamatory air of the tenor at its close is one of Gounod's most effective passages. In the fourth act, the composer is indeed at home, and here we meet with the most satisfying music of the opera. The duet, "Non, ce n'est pas le jour", is a finely dramatic piece of composition, and ranks with the best products of its writer's imagination. In the remainder of the opera, the only things to which especial attention need be called, are the charming orchestral accompaniment to Friar Laurence's announcement of his plan to save Juliet—heard again when she sleeps in the tomb—and the final love-duet.

"Roméo et Juliette" was produced at the Théâtre Lyrique, Paris, April 27, 1867, with Mme. Miolan-Carvalho as Juliet, and M. Michot as Romeo. The rôle of Juliet has been one of Mme. Adelina Patti's favorites, but the best cast of "Romeo and Juliet" in recent times, and probably the best ever brought together, was that of the Metropolitan Opera House at the opening of the season of 1894–95. It consisted of Mme. Melba as Juliet, Mlle. de Vigne as Stephano, Mlle. Bauermeister as the Nurse, M. Jean de Reszké as Romeo, M. Edouard de Reszké as Friar Laurence, M. Plançon as Capulet, Signor Gromzeski as Mercutio, M. Castelmary as the Duke, and M. Mauguiere as Tybalt.
